Ornette Coleman

Randolph Denard Ornette Coleman (March 9 or 19, 1930 – June 11, 2015) was an American jazz saxophonist, violinist, trumpeter, and composer known as a principal founder of the free jazz genre, a term derived from his 1960 album Free Jazz: A Collective Improvisation. Born in Fort Worth, Texas, Coleman began his musical career playing in local R&B and bebop groups, and eventually formed his ...

Ornette Coleman - Wikipedia

Ornette Coleman's earthly accolades, like his Mac Arthur "Genius" Fellowship, Grammy and Pulitzer Prize for Music, reflect the respect due to a soft-spoken man of small stature but giant mind. He dared to sidestep the system, both socially and musically, shape his life's trajectory to his will against all odds – and forever change the way music is listened to and played.

Phil Schaap began broadcasting an annual 24-hour Ornette Coleman birthday broadcast on WKCR in 1970 and has continued, this being the 46th straight year. Truly an inspirational person, Phil was the only person meant to host this gathering. Pharoah Sanders, Ornette's great friend from the 1960s, began the service with a solo performance.

My Father Was Deep by Denardo Coleman - Ornette Coleman

One of the most important (and controversial) innovators of the jazz avant-garde, Ornette Coleman gained both loyal followers and lifelong detractors when he seemed to burst on the scene in 1959 fully formed. Although he, and Don Cherry in his original quartet, played opening and closing melodies together, their solos dispensed altogether with chordal improvisation and harmony, instead playing ...
